Mrs. Pennington said that letters sent by air mail on the plane which left the Kingston Airport Thursday morning, shortly after 10 o'clock, were received by Mark Pennington in Hollywood just 19 hours after being sent. Successful Sunday School Convention

An eager crowd filled the Methodist Episcopal Church at Malden for the spring convention of the town of Saugerties Sunday School Association last Friday night.

After a spirited song service led by the Rev. Robert Barnes, the new minister of the Malden Church, the Rev. Lester L. Haws led in prayer and welcomed the convention.

The committee on field day and picnic reported that reservation had been made through Mr. Cahill of the Cantine Memorial Field for the afternoon of Saturday, June 18, and that details would be reported later.

The climax of the convention was reached when the prizes were awarded in the prize essay competition sponsored by the association for members in high school. The first prize of $10 went to Little Pearson, of the Flatbush Sunday school, and the second prize of $5 was won by Malcolm L. Crump, of the Saugerties Trinity Church school. Superintendent Ryder gave a summary of the main points and suggestions contained in the essays submitted by high school students on the subject, "What Can the Sunday School do for Young People of High School Age?"

The Malden school captured the attendance banner with 34 members present and the West Camp Lutheran Church school retained the banner given for the highest average attendance since the last convention with its average of 90.34 per cent.

The invitation was extended and accepted to hold the regular fall convention on Friday evening, September 16, at the West Camp Lutheran Church.

Grand Jury Hands Down 23 Sealed Indictments Today

Whether the grand jury, which it is understood has been considering the gambling cases that arose out of three raids made recently in Kingston, found any indictments against those seized in the raids or not is not known, but when the grand jury submitted its report to Judge Harry E. Schriek in Supreme Court, this afternoon it handed up 23 sealed indictments.

Hornly Dawson, a negro of this city, charged with possession of policy slips on April 8, entered a plea of guilty to the indictment. He has already served 15 days in the county jail, and he told Judge Schriek that if he was let off he would never sell policy slips again.

District Attorney Cleon B. Murray informed the court that Dawson was only one of the smaller fry, and had acted as a runner for those higher up.

Judge Schriek imposed a sentence of 45 days in jail, which has been served by Dawson.

Bessie Countryman, who is indicted on two counts, both for manslaughter in the first degree, was arraigned and at the request of the district attorney a plea of not guilty was entered at this time, pending the final report of the sheriff who is investigating the matter.

She is accused of pushing a man over a railing in Ellenville. He sustained injuries in the fall which resulted in his death.

Attorney Thomas Plunkett was assigned by the court to defend her.

There were several other arraignments in minor cases.

The grand jury also handed up eight dismissals.

Hope Abandoned.

Washington, May 25 (AP)—Senators interested in railroad legislation said today they had abandoned hope for a compromise to permit approval at this session of more liberal RFC loans to railroads.

Senator Truman (D-Mo.), who introduced the bill, said he believed the railroads' proposal for a 15 per cent wage cut had aroused so much opposition that the measure would be pigeonholed.

Bouten Measure For Peace Justices

Albany, May 25.—(Special)—Several proposed amendments to the constitution have been offered at the state constitutional convention by Arthur F. Bouten of Roxbury, who with Seth T. Cole, of Catskill, and Philip Elting of Kingston, represent the 29th senatorial district of Ulster, Greene and Sullivan counties.

The Bouten proposal makes permissive, instead of mandatory, the election of justices of the peace. This amendment further authorizes the legislature to provide by law for the establishment of inferior courts or courts in any county to perform the duties of justices of the peace, and to regulate the number, classification, duties, terms and judges thereof without conferring any equitable jurisdiction or greater jurisdiction than is conferred upon the county courts.

Word "Thrums" Technical

Term, Authority Asserts
Sir James Barrie carved Thrums ("A Window in Thrums") out of Kilmur— the old weaving town in Scotland where he was born. But why "Thrums"? The answer is given by James A. Roy, a native Kilmurman, in "J. M. Barrie: An Appreciation."

"The word is simply the local technical term for threads, a bunch of which hung on every loom in the old weaving days," said Professor Roy. "These thrums were the ends of warp, saved from previous weaves, or furnished with the new, to mend the broken threads of the growing fabric."

And just as Thrums was only a portion of Kilmur, so were the Auld Lichts ("Auld Licht Idylls"), about whom Barrie writes, only a section of the community, Professor Roy explains. "All Auld Lichts were not weavers and all weavers were not Auld Lichts," he says. "In Barrie's Thrums there were just as many religious denominations as there are in the town today—if not more. Barrie himself was brought up in the Free church, and very possibly was never inside the door of the Auld Licht kirk, which he has immortalized. Religious differences in those days were too acute to permit of wandering from one church to another."

"Barrie left Kilmur" when he was ten years old, and being the son of David Barrie, it is unlikely that he ever saw the inside of any church in Kilmur except his own—the South Free. It was through his mother that he knew the Auld Lichts and their religious views. Margaret Ogilvy was brought up in the Auld Licht kirk, which she continued to attend until her marriage to David Barrie. She took her memories with her and handed them on to her son."

STATE LOTTERIES

There is a surprising amount of support for the idea of gambling ourselves into prosperity. According to a poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion, almost half the people of the United States are convinced that states should operate lotteries to pay the cost of government. Only 51 per cent of the voters opposed such lotteries. They believe government lotteries would foster an unwholesome gambling spirit. Opponents have two main grounds of objection, moral disapproval of all gambling and recognition of the fact that the lottery consumes the money of the poor and unwary.

Those who favor state lotteries say that the public gambles anyhow, that large sums of money go regularly into games of chance, betting on horse races and other sports, foreign sweepstakes, pools of every sort. Why, they ask, shouldn't these huge sums of money go into the public treasuries where they will be used for the public and so do everybody some good?

Curiously, approval of state lotteries is greatest in New England, the Middle Atlantic region and the Pacific Coast, and disapproval strongest in the South. The longing for an unexpected windfall is shown by the fact that the lottery idea is most popular among the very poor. The upper and middle income groups oppose it. Women, as a rule, are firmly against it. We need some straight thinking and plain speaking on this subject.

SOCKING THE UMPIRE

There are natural differences of opinion about the police court case in Huntington, W. Va., where a young baseball player was arraigned for punching the umpire. As the prisoner at the bar explained the case to the judge, he was batting and the umpire called a strike on a ball that was away outside the plate. The batter protested, the umpire refused to listen to reason, the argument waxed hot, and the batter just naturally hit him. "Case dismissed!" said His Honor. "It is the inalienable right of a baseball player to get mad and have a fight with the umpire."

Now, it isn't pleasant for any mere layman to talk back to the judiciary, especially when the judge is greeted with such a chorus of praise as has come to him. But some may ask, what about the umpire who got his face punched for a decision that he doubtless thought was right? Isn't a baseball umpire a member of the judiciary of sport? And what is going to happen to the souls, minds and jobs of umpires if it is permissible for litigants in a ball game to sock them for their decisions?

May a layman not challenge the judicial statement that a baseball player has "an inalienable right to fight with the umpire" and thus, by plain implication, the right to do him bodily harm? We find no such authorization in the Constitution of the United States or the rules of the baseball leagues, major or minor. Perhaps, though, His Honor was invoking the common law of baseball, which underlies, and is older than, all written law. When the judiciary takes refuge in the basic, traditional law, there's no use arguing about it.

THE ATYPUS

Cheer up! The human race, after all, is not to be denied knowledge of the living habits of the "Lost Atypus". The atypus, it seems, isn't even lost. This is a rare spider of a species that for seventy-five years was thought to be extinct. Then, between 1912 and 1938, six specimens were found. That number has suddenly been increased by more than a dozen, secured in Florida by members of a spider expedition of the American Museum of Natural History. The scientists have just returned from a seven-week trip through Florida, during which they covered 2,200 miles and pursued their spider search day and night.

Now the living atypus can be studied. A gap in the story of spiders can be filled with knowledge obtained through careful, scientific observation. And all the people who don't like spiders and shudder at thought of one, can just turn their attention to something else. No entomologists will stick spiders down their backs, and no one will make them look at the terrifying things in their glass cases at the museum. But they shouldn't object to the rejoicing of scientists keen on contributing something to the slowly growing knowledge of life upon this earth.

WHIPPING BOYS

Many people will probably agree with two fathers in Fitchburg, Mass., who refused to whip their sons in compliance with the order of a judge. He had found them guilty of stealing wire from a railroad. One of the fathers simply said that he couldn't whip his boy because he loved him. The other said: "That punishment is too much. I'll punish my son, but it will be in my own way. I think horsewhipping a boy is wrong. I realize the seriousness of what he did, but he doesn't. I'll teach him that, too—and so he won't forget it."

There is far less physical punishment of children now than there used to be, and it doesn't seem likely that children are any worse for it. Grown-ups realize more clearly that whatever punishment is administered should be logical, having some relation to the offense and appealing to the mind and conscience rather than the body. In short, the punishment should "fit the crime". In the present case, for instance, it might mean doing extra work to earn money to pay for the wire stolen and the damage done.

DISLOCATED HEART

A remarkable organic displacement is reported from Detroit. A citizen named John C. Kardell, aged 65, gets an award of $3,500 damages in a suit against the street railway system, as a result of being struck by a bus. The accident shifted his heart 10 inches to the right, and it has remained in that position. His health is described as nothing to brag of, but he gets along better than might be expected.

His heart, as you might say, is on the right side but not in the right place. It must be hard getting used to one's heart ticking away over there.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act)

THE SUN IS A GREAT HEALER
It must come as a shock to many to be told that the rays of the sun may not only not be of help to everybody but can be actually harmful to some individuals. And if there is one disease where we have thought the rays of the sun were helpful, it is in tuberculosis.

Dr. B. Hudson, London, in Tubercle states that the sun is a powerful means of treating certain disorders, especially beneficial in cases of surgical tuberculosis and certain other chronic surgical conditions that are not tuberculous, but "patients with tuberculosis of the lungs should never be allowed to take sun baths, as they are definitely dangerous."

Sun bathing however may be used when of the surgical type—knee, hip—where the process is slow and just in the one place; it is also useful in chronic pleurisy when the process is quite slow. Unsupervised sun bathing can certainly light up (make it start again) an unsuspected tuberculous spot on the lung.

Sun treatment consists in the gradual exposure of the body to the light, not the heat, of the sun, and patients who are taking sun baths should be surrounded by a circulation of free air. This is why sun bathing on the beach is so helpful to those who are free from tuberculosis. Sun treatment should always be supervised and controlled by a medical practitioner. The aim of sun bathing is not burning but tanning. Gradual tanning, not burning, is thus the keynote of the treatment as severe burning really poisons the system.

When tuberculosis is of the scattered type—different spots in the lung, and especially if the patient has "feverish" attacks, exposure to the sun should be strictly avoided, as it is likely to spread the condition.

However, even in tuberculosis of the lungs, when a patient whose progress is slow in becoming cured, sun bathing may be tried as it may give a little stimulus or increased action which, by stirring up the body's defenses, may bring about an earlier cure.

Now the above information does not mean that the sun is not helpful because, as a matter of fact, we do not get enough of it. The sun builds up the blood by increasing the amount of iron in it, stirs up and removes congestion everywhere in the body, prevents "rickets" in children, and raises the morale and well being of all of us. But, when active lung tuberculosis is present or any condition causing a rise of temperature, the patient should not be exposed to the direct rays of the sun.

OCTAGON HOUSE
BY PHOEBE ATWOOD TAYLOR

The Story So Far: Ascy Mayo, Cape Cod detective, is presently investigating the murder of Marina Lorne, whose husband's post office mural has aroused Quamnet. She was killed by a left handed blow from her sister's knife. Suspected Pam Frye disappears because an unknown person who smokes Turkish tobacco is trailing her to discover the whereabouts of $50,000 which she embezzled. Pam found the day of the murder. Agreeable Tim Carr, a boarder at the Frye's Octagon House, is left handed, smokes Turkish tobacco, and hated Marina. Gobby Nettie Hobbs who swears she saw Pam commit the murder, is called a liar by Peggy Boone, an artist. And Roddy Strutt, whose plane crashed in the square, pays Nettie $5,000 to keep his name out of her story. Ascy decides to see the injured pilot.

Chapter 17

The Indestructible Man

"By the way, how's the crowd over to Octagon House getting along?" Ascy asked the traffic cop. "Hanson's got 'em in order now, I guess. But they ripped up the flower beds, though, and a couple was tryin' to make off with that iron deer before he got 'em under control. There's some still around the garage at Lorne's. Someone went by a while ago with a load of barbed wire, an' there was a state cop on the truck. I guess they're settin' up a barrier. Where you bound?"

"Hither an' yon. Oh, if you know where the pickle lines come from, Jerry, go tell the minister's wife over at the Exchange. Tell her I think she could prob'ly palm off lemons dipped in brine, if she got hard up. Oh—an' tell 'em they're missin' a good bet in taffy apples. They'd ought to fetch half a dollar, an' the prime expense is sticks."

He extracted Syl's truck from the maze of parked cars, and bounced over to the little Pochet hospital.

The nurse in charge was the daughter of a neighbor of his. She hesitated a moment when Ascy addressed her by name, and then she laughed.

"Why, Ascy," she said, "I hardly recognized you in that outfit. I don't think I'd have known you if I hadn't seen Syl's truck. That truck used to belong to Father, you know. It's a family legend. Isn't this business over in Quamnet simply hideous? And is it true that you're not helping with the case?"

"What do you think?" Ascy asked.

"You can't fool your neighbors," she said. "Of course you are. You're up to something, dressed this way, and driving that truck. I suppose you want to see Earl Jennings, don't you?"

"Who's he?"

"That Quamnet selectman who got bumped in Roddy Strutt's plane crash last night."

"I'd like to see Roddy Strutt's pilot. Can I?"

She shook her head. "I'm afraid not," she said. "He's in pretty bad shape. We hoped Roddy would agree to sending for Dr. Carter, but Roddy wasn't interested. Roddy isn't even interested enough to notify the fellow's family, if he's got any. We telegraphed all the people whose names and addresses we found in his wallet, but no one's answered, and two wires came back. Unknown, or something."

"Get Carter," Ascy said, "and charge him to me, will you? And—"

"Ascy, that's swell of you!"

"Not a bit," Ascy said. "And when he gets so that he can be asked questions, let me know. Be sure. And—just for fun, if Roddy should take it into his head to see the fellow—what's his name? Brigham? Well, if Roddy asks to see Brigham, cause him to be thwarted, will you?"

'Somethin' Queer'

"I will, and I'll tell the rest. We're all so mad at him, and anyway, you'll be taking charge. That'll make it all right. You know," she added, "I shouldn't say this, but there's something queer about this crash. Brigham's sleeping now, but he's been unconscious, and he kept muttering about the plane, and Roddy calling him names, and telling him to keep off. It was sort of bloodcurdling."

"Could you say, Susan, if all Brigham's injuries come from the crash?"

"Where else—oh, I see what you mean. That someone might have hurt him before I couldn't say. Ascy might be able to tell you, Brigham can, certainly, when he's better. It was quite a crash, enough to bang up those cars in the square, and shake up Earl Jennings—look, won't you take pity on him and see him? He's simply raving about this Quamnet business, and everyone in town's so busy making money out of the tourists, they haven't time to do more than send consoling messages by phone. His wife has been over twice, for ten seconds. She's making doughnuts by the hundred thousands, and she says if she can live through another day, they'll have a new car."

"Is this Jennings hurt bad?" Ascy asked.

"No, he's sort of an indestructible man. He's just bruised, but his doctor wants him to stay for a couple of days, and rest. He's got a bad heart. Won't you see him?"

"Sure, for a minute," Ascy said. "But I don't know the man."

"That won't matter. He knows you, and he's so eager to talk with someone."

Mr. Jennings, a burly six-footer who seemed far too big for his bed, smiled at Ascy and extended his hand.

"Boy," he said feelingly, "am I glad to see a human face!"

Ascy laughed. "I hear you're sort of marooned an' deserted."

"Oh, lots of folks phoned, but as soon as they find out I'm all right and just being kept in cold storage, they send their regards and say they'll drop over when I get back home. You can't blame 'em. There hasn't been so much money loose in town for years. My boy—he's 15—he's had trouble this summer, selling little wooden windmills for a dime apiece. To-day, he and his friend got the idea of making little octagon houses out of two by fours, and painting 'em up, and they're getting a dollar apiece for just as many as they can make. Think of it! If only the doctor—but I suppose he's right. I wouldn't keep quiet, if I got out. I'd be out hawking with the rest. Say, what do you think about this murder?"

"There's more to it than meets the eye," Ascy said, "if that's what you mean."

"Sure there is," Jennings agreed. "After I heard about it, I went up town—I was going to rout out the other selectmen, and have 'em send for you. But they told me you was away, and then that fool crashed his plane, and I landed over here. But you know what I think—and what everyone else in town thinks? We think it's someone that was sore about being pictured in that mural thing. You don't know how mad people in Quamnet are about that!"

"Red Lead Paint!"

"By degrees," Ascy said, "I'm gathering that there's been considerable indignation. But the point is, is there any one person that's madder than any other? And why should Marina be killed, and not Lorne, who painted the picture?"

"Oh, Marina put him up to it," Jennings said. "Lorne's a fool. The only way that fellow can think is with a paint brush in his hand, and then he isn't too bright. Everyone knows she put him up to painting in the faces. He couldn't have thought of it by himself."

"Then you think it's a local person, who knew enough to figure that Marina was to blame?"

"I do," Jennings said emphatically. "And I thought right off the bat about Aaron Frye. He's in the mural. Father Time, or something. I don't know. But he's had more than that from that daughter of his in the past. So has Pam. The way I figure, if they haven't killed Marina before, that picture wouldn't move 'em to kill her now. Then—you'll laugh at this. But I thought of Nettie."

"Is she in the paintin'?" Ascy asked. "I seen it, but I got to laughin' so, I had to go out before I took in more than the main panel."

"On the other panels are the ones with Quamnet faces," Jennings said. "Nettie's an old hag gutting a fish."

"A fish wife, huh? Well, that's apt," Ascy said.

"Uh-huh. And beside her are two pickle lines. She's had a jar of pickle lines in that window of her store for years. Then I decided it couldn't be Nettie, because the time she said she left Octagon House and the time Pam found her sister, they didn't hitch up. And besides, I had a better idea. And you'll think I'm crazy, for sure. I thought of Roddy Strutt."

"Is he in the mural, too?"

"He sure is. With two girls on his lap, and his face—well, it's Roddy all right," Jennings said bitterly. "Anyway, last night when he crawled out of that plane, he was laughin' like it was a joke. I like him anyway, but that made me sore, with Brigham lying there. I limped over, and lousy as I felt, I kicked him square in the seat of his pants. Knocked him down, too. And while he was down, I gave him a couple more kicks."

"That," Ascy said approvingly, "was the proper gesture."

"And you know what I noticed when I kicked him? A couple of streaks on his pants. I thought they were blood at first, but later I seen they weren't. They were red lead paint. And I'm a plumber by trade. And yesterday morning I spent up to Lorne's, fixing up that pump, and painting their water tanks with red lead. And the old water tank that I painted, the one that's out in the garage where Marina was killed. See what I mean?"

Begging For Christopher

AT last Christopher Columbus Crow had their attention and told them the truth.

"He must be punished," said Willy Nilly. "He deceived us."

"That's right," cried Christopher. "With hanging head."

"But we found a watch, a lovely gold watch, and it is for you, Willy Nilly," quacked the ducks.

"Even if Christopher did not know that a watch had fallen into the pond some time, long ago, it was he who got us excited—and because we were excited we dug until we did find something."

"He must be punished," said Willy Nilly firmly. "It was only by luck that you found the watch. It must have been dropped into that pond years and years ago—long before any of us came here."

"Oh, don't punish Christopher," they begged.

It was all Willy Nilly could do to refuse the ducks and the bears and Rio and Sweet Face.

In spite of their muddy appearances, their great weariness, they were so happy.

"I'll give him a little punishment," said Willy Nilly. "A very, very, very, very, very little one," urged the ducks. "I won't let you take any fights for a day," ordered Willy Nilly.

"We don't want him to go away just now," shrieked the ducks. "We want to have a party and celebrate the finding of the watch."

Willy Nilly could not disappoint them—particularly when little Yellow Beak waddled up to him and quacked: "Please Willy Nilly, no punishments, only fun!"

The Outdoor Service

The Ulster County Christian Endeavor Union's experiment with the possibilities of out-of-door devotional services met with success Sunday evening as approximately 130 people were present at Forsyth Park to hear the Rev. Frederick R. Bosch of the Wallkill Reformed Church deliver a sermon on the high ideals of a Christian. This service, one in a series sponsored by the devotional committee, proved an outstanding success, and the favorable comments received by the committee will probably result in another service of this type sometime in July. Excellent musical arrangements consisted of a horn trio by three of the members of the Salvation Army Band. A portable organ, played by Mrs. Seiler of the Salvation Army, furnished music for singing.

Annual Rally, June 18

Miss Dora Pratt, chairman of the annual rally of the Ulster County Christian Endeavor Union, is making arrangements for a fine time at Tilton Lake on Saturday afternoon and evening, June 18. For the benefit of those who desire transportation, plans are being made to run a special bus, leaving the Central Post Office in Kingston. The idea of this rally is a general get-together of Endeavorers from all sections of the county in a combination picnic and devotional service. President Frances K. Rousa has announced that a short business session of the county officers will be held at this rally.

Convention Contests

Endeavorers are asked to "get busy" on their entries in the two contests being sponsored in conjunction with the annual state convention, held this year at Brooklyn June 30-July 3. The poster contest, in charge of Nelson H. Lewis, will close June 18 at the annual rally at Tilton Lake, while the snapshot contest will close June 18, and entries must be sent to Henry P. Eighmey, 62 East Chester street.

Dr. Evans was called to Canada by the illness of his mother, Mrs. Quinn accompanied him. Mr. and Mrs. Surriker and son of Chichester were callers here.

Poison ivy can be easily recognized. Its pale green foliage is fresh and shining, three-pointed, and delicately notched. Clusters of waxy berries help to establish its identity. Nevertheless, people continue to touch it, sit down on it, and brush up against it, unaware. Realization first comes with an itching sensation that is usually followed by painful inflammation of the skin.

Sec. Ickes Expected To Take His Bride To London Today

London, May 25 (AP).—Secretary of the Interior Ickes and his red-haired bride, who is 39 years his junior, were expected in England today on a whirlwind honeymoon. The secretary's plans were not disclosed after the surprise secret wedding in Dublin yesterday, but it was believed the pressure of his duties would force a return to Washington after a hasty trip to London and Paris.

The bride's uncle, John Cudney, minister to Ireland, did not attend the ceremony in a small Presbyterian Church in Dublin. The year-old Ickes motored to Ireland to catch a boat for England, and did not see Cudney at all. Ickes arrived in Ireland just before the wedding. So well had the romantic secret been kept that even the minister knew Ickes only as an American "civil servant and lawyer"—the blunt-spoken cabinet member's own description of himself when he signed the marriage register. Mrs. Ickes, the sister of Mrs. Wilmarth Ickes, widow of the secretary's step-son, was a former employee in two of her husband's departments.

As Miss Dahlman, the 25-year-old Smith College graduate, spent four months in the National Park service gathering data on historic buildings and sites in 1935. Later she transferred to the reclamation bureau.

It was Ickes' second marriage. His first wife was killed in an automobile accident in New Mexico August 31, 1935.

A good idea that dun gone wrong

A bill collector, wanting to get action on overdue accounts, had a batch of postcards printed asking the people who received them to call such and such a telephone number "on a very important matter."

Unfortunately, he failed to proofread the cards; they were sent out with the wrong telephone number. But the telephone subscriber whose number did appear on the cards knows the idea was good. His telephone rang continuously—until he put in an S O S to the local telephone office.

Provided you don't start with the wrong number, it's a good idea to display your telephone number as prominently as your street address—on advertising material, business forms, stationery both business and personal. The easier you make it for people to get in touch with you, the more likely they are to do it. New York Telephone Company.

Testimony Ends In Action Against Church Sidewalk

Testimony was closed this morning in the $10,000 action brought by Rose Baglitter and her husband against The First German Lutheran Church of Elmhurst. Mrs. Baglitter claims she fell in March of 1937 on the church walk and fractured her leg.

At the conclusion of the testimony Andrew J. Cook for defendant moved to dismiss the complaint and Justice Schirlick reserved decision on the motion. Summations by counsel were commenced.

In order to hasten the court proceedings Justice Schirlick asked counsel in the next case to select a jury and be ready to proceed when the summations and charge in the Baglitter case were concluded. Jurors were taken to the supervisors room and N. Jansen Fowler, attorney for plaintiff, Lawrence P. McHugh, and Charles S. Friedman, attorney for defendant, selected a jury for trial of the action.

The action is brought by Mrs. Hugh of Kingston against the defendants who reside on Mt. Vernon to recover money damages for fraud. The action arises over the lease of a property at Tillison.

It Isn't Child's Play If She Can't Participate

Edited By Lydia Gray Shaw

WRONG It may be a fine idea for mother and child to spend time playing outdoors together, but don't be so energetic that you place your child in the role of a spectator. She wants to help fill the wheelbarrow, too.

RIGHT Better to leave a child alone to devise his own kind of outdoor play, even if he isn't as efficient about it as his mother. This youngster is having a fine time watering the lawn. And no one tells him how to do it.

Look Pleasant!
We cannot, of course, all be handsome, and it's hard for us all to be good; and we are sure now and then to be lonely, and we don't always do as we should. To be patient is not always easy. To be cheerful is much harder still; but at least we can always be pleasant. If we make up our minds that we will. And it pays every time we look kindly. Although you feel worried and blue, if you smile at the world and be cheerful, the world will smile back at you. So, try to brace up and look pleasant. No matter how low you are down, good humor is always contagious. But you banish your friends when you frown.

While traveling through Georgia recently a young salesman was forced to dine at an isolated farm house. Not being well satisfied with his meal of corn bread and fatback, he asked if he might have a glass of milk. Host—No, you won't find any milk around here since the dog died. What's that got to do with it? Host—Why, who do you suppose is going to fetch the cow up?

READ IT OR NOT—
A total of $24,510,000 was spent in advertising cigarettes in the United States newspapers in 1937.

As the train roared past the station, the agent heard a yell and rushed out to find a man sprawling beside the track. Agent (to little girl, the only person in sight)—Did he try to catch the train? Little Girl—He caught it, but it got away from him.

ALERTNESS—The big things you can see with one eye closed. But you must keep both eyes open for the little things. And these are the discoveries that really count. It is these little things that usually mark the dividing line between success and failure in life.

Teacher—Surely you know what the word "mirror" means, Junior. After you've washed your face and hands, what do you look at to see if your face is clean? Junior—The towel, ma'am.

One Rose
One rose may lead the droariest room
A wealth of cheer and sweet perfume.
One word of faith may lead a throne
Of fear-torn hearts to sing hope's song.

Mrs. Smith—Did that expensive treatment cure your husband's baldness?
Mrs. Jones—Yes, in fact, when the bill came in he was able to tear out handfuls of hair in his rage at the high fees.

The best portion of a man's life are his little nameless, unremembered acts of kindness.

Professor—Frequent water-drinking prevents becoming stiff in the joints.
Pretty Co-ed—Yes, but some of the joints don't serve water.

Son—Dad, what does it mean here by "Diplomatic Phrasology"?
Dad—My son, if you tell a girl that time stands still while you gaze into her eyes, that's diplomacy. But if you tell her her face would stop a clock, you're in for it.

We know no such thing as genius; it is nothing but labor and diligence.

Stamps In The News

By James B. Hatcher
The Pourquoi Pas?, a ship which had sailed in polar waters nearly 20 years, put into Itsekjavik's break harbor in September, 1936. After a voyage to East Greenland, she was en route home to France with 28 aboard, the crew of 40, scientists and her 63-year-old commander, Dr. Jean Baptiste Charcot.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, stopping then in Reykjavik, talked with Dr. Charcot and marveled at the young enthusiasm of this man who had led the French Antarctic expeditions of 1903-05 and 1908-10.

The night after the Pourquoi Pas? sailed, a great gale blew up and drove her onto Iceland's southwestern shore, a wreck. Only one sailor survived. France held a funeral at Notre Dame for Charcot and his men.

Genial, unselfish Charcot, son of the great French neurologist, studied medicine but turned to the sea. He was the first scientific leader in the Antarctic to command his own ship.

Though 47 when the World War broke out, he joined the French navy as a surgeon and was shifted to command a trawler in the anti-submarine flotilla at Dover. He spoke excellent English. After the war, he began his annual trips to Greenland studying currents and ice distribution, training younger polar enthusiasts.

He loved his Pourquoi Pas? In 1907 he had watched the builders lay her keel at St. Malo which supplied her crew. The widows of these sailors are among those to benefit from sales of a new French charity stamp. It carries a finely engraved study of Charcot, is blue-green and of 65-centime value, plus 35-c surtax.

Airmail Catcher Deluge.
The number of airmail covers which will be produced in this land from May 15 to 21 (Air Mail Week) is bound to be nothing short of myriads. In New York state alone, 170 cities and towns (from Accord to Yonkers) have issued special cachets. On Michigan's upper peninsula, 25 cities will join the augmented airmail circuits and seven of these postmasters are concealing cachets. So it goes, over the nation. The Martha Washington head on the new 1½-cent stamp, out May 5, was taken from a bust by Mrs. L. MacDonald Fleeth which stands in D. A. R. headquarters at Washington. Engravers were L. C. Kaufman, portrait; J. T. Vall, lettering.

Two Upcoming "Specials"
The 3-cent purple commemorative which the Post Office Department plans to issue for the 30th anniversary of the Swedish settlement at Wilmington, Del., will take its design from a painting by Stanley Arthur. The picture, owned by Joseph S. Wilson, of Delaware, shows Peter Minuit and a party of settlers approaching a band of Indians at The Rocks (Delaware's "Plymouth rock"), with the ship Kalmar Nyckel in the background.

This stamp is expected to go on sale first at Washington and Wilmington June 27 when a delegation from Sweden headed by Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf will unveil and present to America a monument commemorating the Swedish settlement.

The 15th anniversary of organized government in the Northwest Territory is to be celebrated at Marietta, Ohio, in July. The post office has promised a stamp for this occasion and collectors expect it to be a reissue of the recent Northwest territory commemorative suitably overprinted.

Efficient Disinfectant Will Cut Down Sickness
Greater health control through the application of more adequate methods of home cleansing is one of the most needed sanitary measures today, according to health authorities throughout the nation. This fact is backed by numerous scientific investigations.

It is estimated that approximately 2,000,000 people a day suffer from colds and other respiratory diseases. This number might be greatly reduced if more modern methods of disinfected household cleansing were generally practiced.

Tests made with towels, table, bed and personal cottons and linens show that millions of dangerous germs can live on as little as one square inch of surface, indicating the need for regular use of a safe and efficient disinfectant. Similar experiments in the home show that vast numbers of germs are commonly found in dish water and on dish cloths. They are easily transmitted to dishes and drinking glasses, and this disease is often spread. Refrigerators, drainboards, sinks, garbage receptacles, toilet bowls, wash basins, bathtubs also harbor germs.

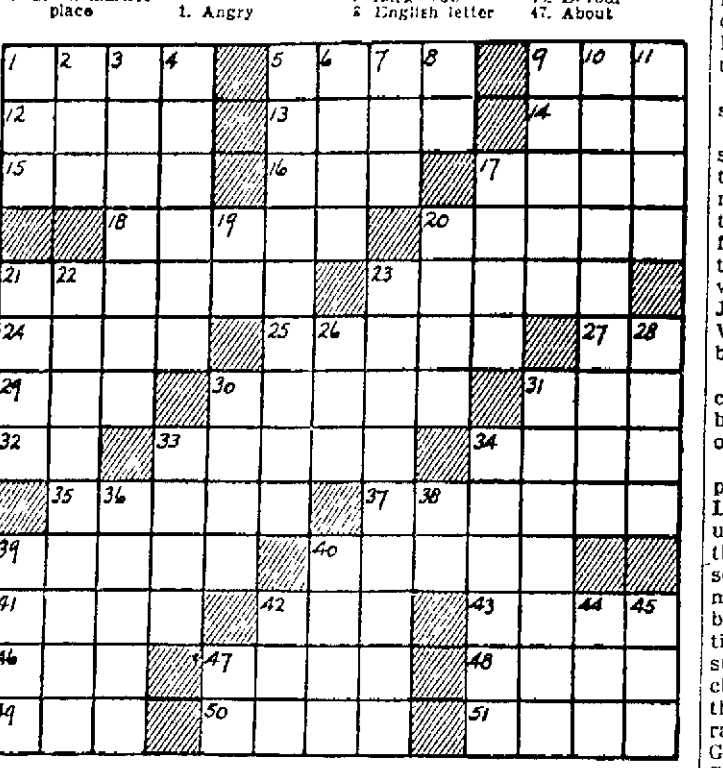

Millions of housewives have already placed their homes on a higher plane of cleanliness and safety through disinfected cleansing. Life's authorities urge every housewife to do the same in order to aid in cutting down the daily toll of sickness.

Kingston District Annual Stewards Meeting Is Held

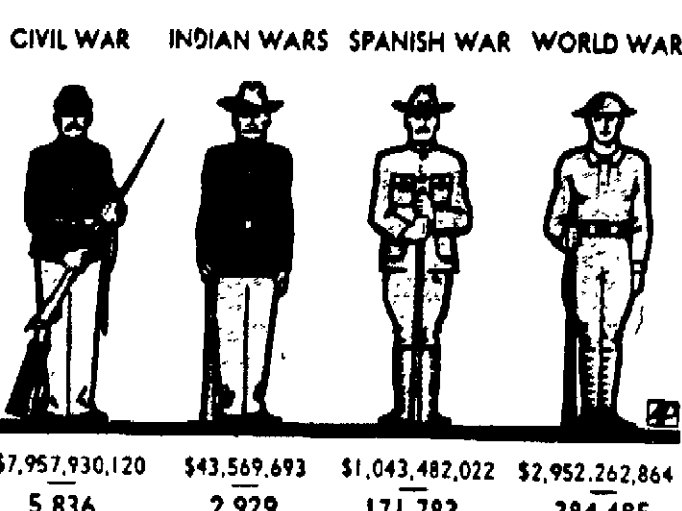

The annual meeting of the Stewards of Kingston District convened in Clinton Avenue Methodist Church Friday, May 20, with about 200 in attendance. The program so well planned by the superintendent, Dr. Joseph W. Chassey, was as follows: After the very helpful devotions by Dr. Fred H. Deming, E. B. Schepmoes extended a welcome, representing the local church. This warm welcome was responded to by Elsha M. Parks. The Rev. Charles F. Johnson, conference representative in Kingston, China, presented a very vivid picture of the missionary facts and activities as they are in China at the present time. After some very challenging remarks relative to obligations to missions by Dr. Chassey, he introduced Dr. Shaw of the Mission Board for just a greeting, and as the afternoon speaker.

Mrs. Rignall favored with a solo.

Then the following were presented, representing various interests: Dr. Allan Mac Rossie, ministerial training; the Rev. Arthur G. Carroll, summer school for ministers at Carmel June 27 to July 1; C. W. Christman, Oakwood Epworth League Institute, July 2-10, and Dr. Peter C. Weyant, superintendent of Newburgh District.

After a delicious dinner at the church and devotions Dr. Shaw brought a timely message on obligations in missions. Two themes on duances were presented. The Rev. Henry G. Lincoln of Coxsack told of his unique experience in financing the church's program by subscriptions as a substitute for so many suppers, reducing the number from 12 to one congregational supper and increasing the subscriptions 57 per cent. This change was not at the expense of the social life of the church, but rather improved it. The Rev. Gordon G. Hawley of Grand Gorge presented some interesting facts in church repairs. Beginning with the largest project first, the church rug, interests

Colony Club Had Jovial Time May 21

The members of the "Colony Club" and guests had a jovial time at Huling's Barn in Kingston on Saturday evening, May 21. This occasion was to commemorate the success of the play recently presented at West Camp by the organization.

The crowd dined and drank at a table gaily decorated with the club colors of maroon and white. Of course everyone enjoyed the music and dancing and fun prevailed until the closing hour.

Wouldn't you like to join in the hilarity that the "Colony Club" is planning for future times? The books are now open for membership, and we would welcome your application.

IT'S OLD But It's Science

By HOWARD W. BLANK (AP Science Editor)
New York—Geriatrics, the great medical practice of the future.
The name comes from word—geron—meaning old. The prediction is from Henry A. Christian, M.D., Harvard Medical School in the American College of Geriatrics.
Geriatrics is coming, this from a rather contradictory notion. More people are older, he says, but old is not living any longer than

He denies the popular belief that the span of life is lengthening. It is merely that preventive medicine has permitted more and more people to live until they are old.

"Curiously enough," he states, "statistics indicate that while older people grow more numerous, the really old do not increase but even seem to decrease."

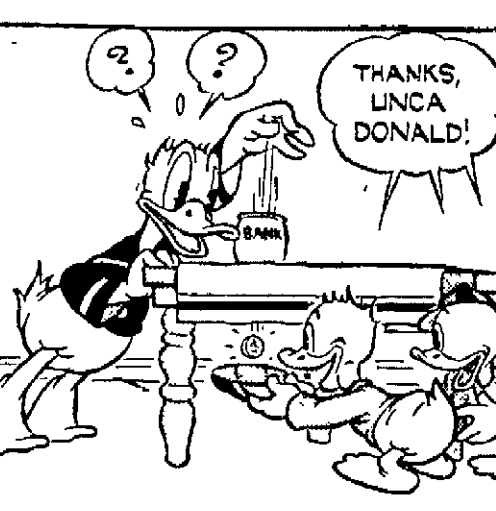

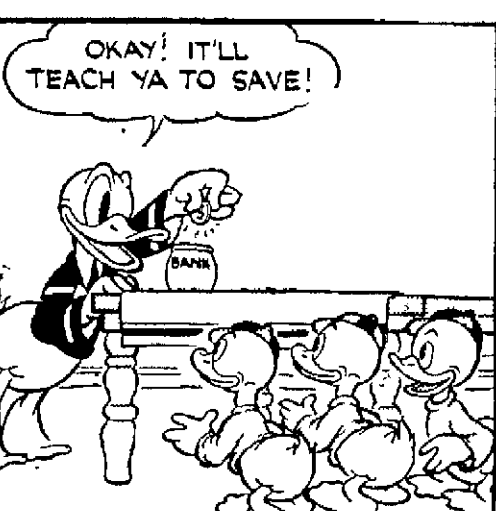

More individuals will develop degenerative diseases, which are the main causes of illness in the aged, and the younger ones among this aged group. Dr. Christian thinks, will become increasingly susceptible to the degenerative diseases and will be likely to have them longer.

To Restrain C.C. Contract In Water Case

Taxpayer's action to restrain New York City Board of Water Supply from awarding contracts for an additional water supply system, was heard before the Court of Appeals Monday. The action brought on the grounds the awards call for a wage in excess of the prevailing rate of wage in the community involved, is brought by Mayo L. French, Jr., of Brooklyn, and is directed to the work in Putnam, Westchester and Dutchess counties.

French appealed to the higher court from an Appellate Division ruling recently handed down in New York dismissing his complaint for an injunction. He charged that awarding the contracts constituted a waste of public monies.

The original taxpayer's action commenced in Brooklyn, for a time delayed the awarding of the contract at Lackawack after bids had been received but when the Appellate Division dismissed the complaint of French the board entered into a contract for the Lackawack coter dams, diversion tunnels and other work. While the French action did not apply to the Lackawack project, had he been successful in the other counties an action to restrain work in Ulster county would probably have been taken. Work on the Lackawack project is expected to commence in earnest very shortly giving employment to a considerable force of men.

More than ever, New York state children should have good health because of the recent rapid growth of child study groups sponsored by several state-wide organizations. The child study and family life discussion groups, sponsored by the home economics extension service, have grown from 17 groups in three counties to 38 groups in 27 counties.

Attempt to Kidnap Motor Magnate Fails

Viscount Nuffield (above), fabulously wealthy British motor magnate, was the object of an attempted kidnap effort, which resulted in the arrest of two men. The men were seized after they had entered the industrialist's office at the Cowley Motor Works near Oxford, Eng., and ordered him to enter their automobile. Viscount Nuffield, often referred to as the "Henry Ford of Great Britain," has given away nearly $15,000,000 in the past 15 years.

Ellenville Pastor On Stand Tuesday In Ice Walk Case

The Rev. Olney E. Cook, pastor of the Ellenville German Lutheran Church, defendant in a $10,000 action for damages brought by Mrs. Rose Baglietto and her husband for injuries which she suffered on March 16, 1937, when she allegedly fell on an icy walk in front of the church on Center street, testified Tuesday that at the time Mrs. Baglietto fell the walks had not yet been cleared of a snow which had fallen that evening and early morning and that there was no ice on the walks.

Boy Scouts Testify

Boy Scouts from the church troop also testified that it was their duty to clean the walks after each snow storm and that the walks had been kept clear of ice. When any ice formed there was salt and ashes used but they claimed that at the time Mrs. Baglietto fell it had not been necessary to use this precaution because there had been no ice. Testimony was offered to the effect that during March 14, 15 and 16, 1937, there had been one of the heaviest snowstorms of the season. The walks had been cleared by Scouts and they found no ice on the walks underneath the snow. The contention is that at the time Mrs. Baglietto fell the snow had ceased to fall only recently and the walks on Center street had not been cleared of about a foot of snow. Passing pedestrians had made a narrow packed foot path in the snow and it is alleged that this was what caused the plaintiff to fall.

Plaintiff's Claims

Plaintiff claims that she came out of her home and passed around the corner of Ann street into Center street where the church is located and as she was passing down Center street she slipped on ice which had formed from a leader which discharged roof water on the lawn and allowed it to run down over the walk and freeze.

The defendants claim that the leader did discharge water on the lawn some 20 feet from the walk but that the lawn is practically flat and the water does not drain over the walks.

There was considerable testimony given as to the exact conditions as the plaintiff claims existed at the church property. The defense contends that the section of the church roof which drains on the lawn is small and is but a small section of an addition to the main building and consequently did not discharge any considerable volume of water on the ground.

Eisworth Baker of Monticello appears with Manuel Dittenheimer for plaintiffs and Andrew J. Cook for the defense. The case was not concluded at the adjournment time Tuesday and was continued today.

DECORATION DAY WEEK-END

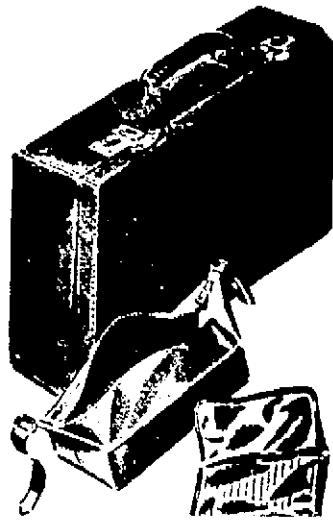

You may not need a rest, but we'll bet you can surely do with a vacation. So why not freshen up your wardrobe so you, too, may take advantage of the three-day holiday week-end coming up?

Cut yourself a slice of safety with one of these smart new belts. The top one is cordovan; the lower, full grain cowhide.

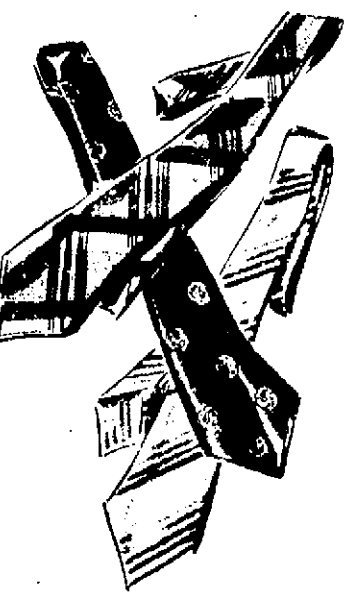

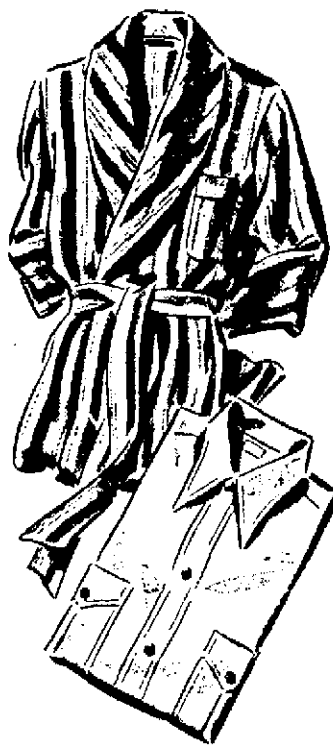

At least one right-minded gentleman is off for a restful week-end. We might well profit by his choice of apparel, especially his grey flannel suit, which is the season's tops for smartness and general utility.

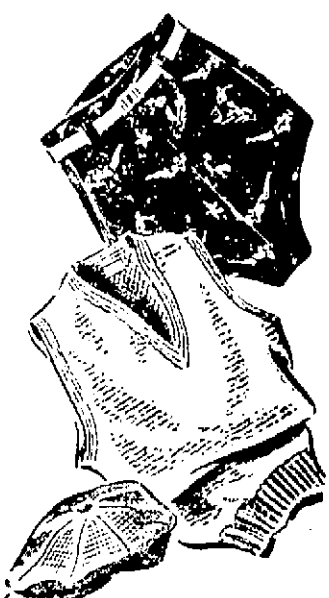

Ideal traveling companions are your attractive and dependable luggage. The Talon-fastened toilet kit is waterproof oil silk lined.

It's too bad that propriety won't permit parading in your pajamas because the owner of these colorful affairs will certainly want to show them off.

Gentlemen are distinguished by the company they keep—and if it's to be around your neck all day you can't be too choosy. These summerweight ties should take your eye.

The old swimming hole never saw towels like these before. They're of a silky knitted texture construction. You needn't be a polter to go for the sweater and cap.

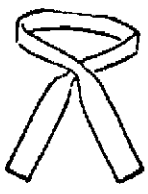

Here again is our friend in the country. Recognize the hat, tie, and slacks? They're the same he wore from town. Look! He made such a quick change he forgot his mustache.

What's the Easiest Way to Tie a Bow?

Judging from the number of inquiries, the vagaries of the bow tie present a "knotty" problem to far too many men. And, with warmer weather coming on, the bow tie offers an increasingly attractive and comfortable variation to the conventional four-in-hand.

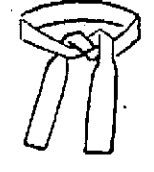

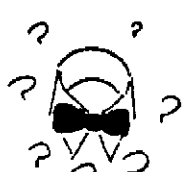

Here's how you tie it: With the ends hanging evenly on either side, the first step is to execute a simple overhand knot. Draw this up snugly against the neck, making it lie as flat as possible; and see that the ends are still of equal length. You now slip another overhand beneath the first, this time a loose one. Make sure that the second knot results in a square knot, as shown, and not a granny knot. Beware of the latter, also known as a cow-hitch, which not only presents an ungainly appearance but will slip upon the slightest provocation.

Now, before tightening the second half of the knot, slip the ends back through it. And when properly flattened and freed from wrinkles, tighten it; and the half indicated by the arrow will slip up naturally to present a smooth top to your finished bow.

Try a little practicing on your shoe? lace, where the same conditions prevail, and you should soon become adept.

Michael School Work Continues

Work on the Myron J. Michael School is progressing rapidly and it is anticipated that the building will be enclosed within the next couple of weeks. Brick work is practically completed on the outer walls and the roof is being placed. This will take some time after which the ends will be bricked up and interior finishing work will then be pushed to completion.

While the work is being rushed with all speed by the contractors, present indications are that the building will not be ready for the opening of school in September. Once the exterior is completed the finishing of the interior will require considerable time. Materials for the work are on hand and no delays are anticipated.

Another Ulster county school job which is progressing rapidly is the new Highland school building. Brick laying was commenced the first of this week with a considerable force of men at work.

Joseph Pollet Deserted Advertising for Art

"Landscape"

"Quarry"

"Portrait of a Girl"

Woodstock, May 25—When Joseph Pollet was 14 his family left their home in Switzerland and came to America. They were a large family in a small country and were all eager to satisfy the wanderlust, which brought them to the United States, and eventually to Hyde Park, N. Y., where they made their home.

Of the many careers followed by the versatile family, Joseph Pollet became a writer of advertising copy, a good one, with a promising future. In order to help himself further in his business he decided he needed some art training. To his surprise he liked the studies and so continued, at the Art Students League. He soon amazed his family with the decision to forget business and become an artist. To their further astonishment he was an immediate success. The Whitney Museum saw his work, liked it, and promptly gave him a one-man show. The Dudensing's gallery took him up and from then on praise and money rolled in. His work was the vogue, talked of and exhibited everywhere.

Guggenheim Scholarship In 1929 he received a Guggenheim scholarship and spent a year and a half in Europe. He did no painting during this period but spent his time studying in museums and galleries. It was then that he began to have doubts about his painting. "Before this I was wonderful, so everyone told me, therefore I never had to think about my painting. But after I'd seen the work of the great masters I knew it was time I got down to work, and learned how to paint."

He had come to the point where he could no longer, "Look out the door, see everything wonderful, paint for hours, confident in my work." Now his work no longer went as he wanted, he wasn't even certain what he did want. Then slowly he began to find what he was groping for, he was on sure ground again and started anew.

Too Five Years "It took me nearly five years to straighten myself out, until I could paint as I wanted. In the meantime things were not so glolously rosy as they had been." To make this period more difficult, a change in his work rather annoyed the galleries, the critics, and the public. Moreover times were hard and art was no longer profitable.

It was on his return from Europe that he came to live near Woodstock. He wanted to spend his summers in the country, his winters in New York, so when his family sold their home in Hyde Park he selected his own place here.

Two years ago he married a girl whom he met while lecturing in the fine arts course at Skidmore. Of five or six hundred students in his classes she was, he says, "unconsciously preparing for her future as wife of an artist, by majoring in fine arts."

In his summer home here he has a whole barn for his studio, and many acres on which he can amuse himself. The house is a comfortable and attractive old farmhouse, with plenty of room for his family, which in summer includes two daughters by an earlier marriage.

Pollet's work, to use his own words, "is based on the known principles of painting, as used by the old masters, but at the same time modern, and American."

Thoroughly American That his work is thoroughly American is evident, for his paintings are found in important exhibitions of American art, and in important museum and gallery collections. In 1935 the Canadian government assembled a collection of American paintings which toured the most important cities of Canada. Pollet's work was included, as being essential to a complete representation of American art. He received honorable mention in the Annual International Exhibition of Contemporary Paintings at Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, in 1929.

Other galleries and museums owning his work are Newark Museum, New York University, Whitney Memorial Gallery, Washington, D. C., Los Angeles Museum, Dartmouth College Gallery.

For a time he was influenced by the work of Titian, whom he says was, "the clearest exponent of all the laws that the old masters had discovered over a period of 100 years. All good painters ever since have applied his laws, the preliminary factor of which is that any good thing must be based on a deep observation of nature."

"Intellectual Notions" This is why Mr. Pollet feels that the modern trends such as cubism and abstraction are nothing but "intellectual notions." "They are not based on nature so cannot be fundamentally good." He goes even further by saying that "American versions of the same are nothing but ridiculous."

"European art today is decadent, no longer great. American art, though a long way from the point reached by the old masters, is on its way, pioneering, virile, vigorous, and deep rooted."

"What we need most in this country is an intelligent public. America is young as a race and has not yet reached the point where it is necessary to develop an appreciation of art." This will come slowly, he believes, and can be hastened by an improvement in the quality of the museum and gallery staffs, and art critics, most of whom have had no opportunity to develop a discriminative appreciation themselves.

He believes that the "wide and catholic interest of the national government in American art promises something. It is a sign of public recognition of the fact that an artist has an important place in the country's life and history." He states further that "fifty years or more from now the government interest in art will probably be recognized as one of the largest benefits of the depression."

Mother Goose Lived in the Eighteenth Century Mother Goose was no myth, as is commonly supposed, but an actual personage, asserts a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. She lived in Boston at the beginning of the Eighteenth century. She had an endless stock of old rhymes and jingles in her memory, which she taught her grandchildren, and other children of the neighborhood.

Her daughter, Elizabeth, married a Mr. Fleet and he believed it might be worth while for her to collect these ditties and put them in permanent form for the use of future generations. He, therefore, brought out a book, of which the earliest edition now known bears the following title: "Songs for the Nursery; or, Mother Goose's Melodies for Children. Printed by T. Fleet, at his printing house, Pudding Lane, Boston, 1719. Price, 2 coppers."

There is little doubt that this was the first edition of the work, since the old records of Boston give the date of the marriage of Thomas Fleet and Elizabeth Goose as 1715.

U. S. SAILORS FIRST ON CANTON ISLAND

May Figure in Settlement of Disputed Ownership.

Boston.—Thanks to the shipwreck of a Yankee whaling captain and his crew of 32 more than 80 years ago the United States may win possession of a tiny but strategically located island in mid-Pacific.

Great Britain's claim to Canton Island for an airplane base is contested by the United States on grounds the island was discovered by Capt. Andrew Johnson King in 1854, when his vessel foundered on its coral reefs.

Details of the almost-forgotten shipwreck and the crew's 4,000-mile row back to civilization were recalled by Horace Guild, Boston lawyer and grandson of the skipper, in an interview.

"It was on August 10, 1852, as Cap'n King and his crew set sail from New Bedford in the Canton whaling in the north Atlantic and Pacific," Guild said.

Landed at Tahiti. "Gradually working their way around Cape Horn, they reached Tahiti in January, 1854, and landed 1,700 barrels of whale oil. Resuming fishing in the Pacific ocean, they ran into a tropical storm on March 4, 1854.

"According to their maps, they were 90 miles from land, but at 1:30 a. m. next day they struck a coral reef. The ship bilged and the lardboard quarter was washed away."

First ashore, Guild said, was William B. Carroll of New Bedford, first mate, who swam through surf and secured a line on the uncharted island, which is near the junction of the equator and the international date line.

Wing and the other 31 crew members followed. When the storm subsided they returned to the wrecked whaler and brought food, water and four 30-foot whaleboats ashore. They were forced to abandon 1,300 barrels of whale oil.

"With provisions and water running low," Guild continued, "they decided March 30 to attempt to row back to civilization. They set out in the four whaleboats, eight men to a boat.

Hardships Not Known. "No one knows the innumerable hardships they encountered. My grandfather never spoke of that long trip, preferring to forget the details. His report to the ship's agents merely told the startling and arriving dates.

"I did learn from him, however, that the men were rationed to half a pint of water and a half a sea biscuit a day as long as the provisions lasted.

"It was not until May 15-45 days after they left Canton Island—that the weary sailors arrived at Tinian island in the Ladrones. They had rowed 4,000 miles and had not lost a single man."

The crew's reception at Tinian was distinctly hostile. However, the Pacific at that time was infested with pirates and the Spanish authorities doubted the ragged, bearded sailors' claim that they were shipwrecked Americans, Guild said.

"The authorities permitted them to remain on the island less than 24 hours, only long enough to take a fresh water and coconuts. Then once again they set off in their whaleboats.

"Four days later they reached Guam and their journey ended. Captain King continued on to Hong Kong and shipped back to the United States."

World's Smallest Republic San Marino, high in the Italian Apennines, area 22 square miles, population 13,000, is the world's smallest republic and one of the most ancient. The republic, which consists of a craggy mountain about 2,200 feet high, on which is the town, and some surrounding territory, with four or five villages, is entirely surrounded by Italian provinces, but has maintained its independence since the Fourth century, and coins its own money, as well as maintaining diplomatic representatives in various foreign countries.

The legislature of the republic consists of a senate of 60 members elected for life. Administrative functions are in the hands of two regents, or presidents, who are chosen every six months.

Early Reference to Compass The magnetic compass, friend of navigators when Columbus discovered America, was known at least as long ago as the Twelfth or Thirteenth century, says Nikola Tesla, noted physicist. He has a definite allusion to it in a poem by Guyot de Provins, a medieval French writer. Tesla disagrees with the conclusion of the Berlin geographer, Heinrich Winter, that the compass was first used by Norse sea-wanderers. He considers it more probable that the instrument was invented by either Chinese or Arabs.

Church Play Was A Great Success

With a banner crowd in attendance, the three-act comedy, "Among the Stars," presented by the Young People's Fellowship of St. John's Church, was a smashing hit. Divided into good talking scenes and witty remarks from the cast, the huge audience, which numbered around the 300 mark, was in a continual laughing mood throughout. The successful show was presented on Monday evening in the parish house.

The plot centered around Amantia Cecelia Bibbels, played by Polly Ann Smith; Sigmond Alfred Bibbels, taken by King Bogardus; Ethlyn Barnes, a very pretty maid, but far from the least was the capable acting of Jack Sharot in the difficult role of Frederick Tierney, a butler. The latter two are employed by the Bibbels, who do not know of the recent marriage of their employees, but this is smoothed out as the play reaches a climax. Coming into the Carle Heights, a site about 35 miles out of Hollywood, the maid and butler seek to find material for a new story as they were journalists in the making. Before their story was completed, however, a vicious New York gangster, arriving and puts a crimp into the plans of the married couple.

There were also other numerous outstanding parts in the play of which was the stand-out performance of King Bogardus, as the erratic Bibbels in search of his "stars."

The aforementioned character was undoubtedly the hit of the play; however, credit is certainly due to the remainder of the cast. The parts were cleverly taken by the following: Phyllis Grant, Dorthy Schiavone, Helen Smith, Thelma Tranker, Jack St. Leger, Hub St. Leger, Arthur Lynch, Loevery and Irwin Thomas.

Aer the first act expired, the "Spits of Spring," an all-boy attraction was presented. Those taking part were Jack Sharot, Jack St. Leger, Lou Every and Irwin Thomas. Through the capable assistance of Mrs. Bertrand Bishard and Mrs. Verno, the dancers were daintily dressed in appropriate dresses along with pretty tunics. In all the dancing, these boys went through their paces in a manner equal to any Samuel Goldwyn chorus girl. So pleased were the audience that the quiet came back for an encore as Jack Sharot offered a solo entree, "Shine Little Glow Worm, Shine," while his mates helped in their own way by showing emotion to the song he was singing.

Following the play, Thelma Tranker, president of the Y.P.F., presented a gorgeous basket of flowers to Mrs. Bertrand Bishard for her invest and willingness shown in seeing the cast into another dramatic success. In the usual charming manner, Mrs. Bishop thanked all.

The following were responsible for the success of this presentation: Business managers, Virginia St. Leger and Jack Sharot; stage managers, King Bogardus and Lou Every; property managers, Abigail Elliott, Mrs. St. Leger; ticket manager, Jessie Kaprellan; Marian Oberon and advertising manager, Irwin Thomas.

In conjunction with this play, the Young People's Fellowship wishes to thank all who have assisted in anyway with helpful advice and assistance.

Morgan Charges 2 TVA Directors Gave False Report

Washington, May 25 (AP)—Arthur E. Morgan charged today that two Tennessee Valley Authority directors—H. A. Morgan and David E. Lillenthal—participated in falsifying a report on TVA negotiations for the purchase of utility properties owned by the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation.

A. E. Morgan, ousted chairman of the TVA, testified before a 10-man congressional inquiry committee, elaborating on charges he had made previously against the other two directors.

After making a general charge that "collusion, conspiracy and mismanagement" had characterized the administration of TVA, the tall, gray-haired former chairman said Lillenthal made a "persistent attempt" to convince the public that Commonwealth and Southern "was arbitrarily refusing to sell its properties."

Through Wendell L. Wilkie, its president, Commonwealth and Southern repeatedly offered to sell "any or all" of its properties, Morgan said.

He testified at length regarding negotiations with the company, which he said were carried on largely by Lillenthal. After a meeting of Wilkie and the TVA Board last January, the former chairman said, Lillenthal issued a news release which "gave a very false and inaccurate impression" of Wilkie's position.

"The news release was an explicit falsification, the natural result of which was to deceive the public on a vital issue, to engender increased public bitterness toward the utilities and to substitute conflict and recrimination for open and aboveboard dealing with the facts," Morgan said, adding:

"Both the other directors were deliberately and consciously parties to this falsification."

Latest Outboard Motor Is Johnson Sea Horse

The Harley-Davidson Sales, of 249 Broadway, local motorcycle dealers, have taken the agency for the Johnson Sea Horses, the latest development in outboard marine motors.

The Sea Horse combines smoothness, quietness, and flexibility in three new features listed as alternate firing, underwater exhaust, and full pivot reverse. These features insure fine performance in outboard boating—a dependability backed by 16 years of experimentation in the manufacture of outboard motors, and the Johnson Motors invite comparison of its product with any other outboard motor.

Stock Averages Again "In the Red"

New York, May 25 (AP)—A steady dribble of offerings were down stocks today in the absence of aggressive buying support for the market.

Losses of fractions to more than a point left leading shares around the final hour at the lowest levels of a slow retreat from the April-May rally tops. The market tried to rally feebly in the forenoon but again encountered apathy among traders.

Transactions, a little more active than in the preceding session, still were at the rate of only about 500,000 shares for the full session.

Emphasized by some brokers as of surpassing interest to Wall Street for the moment was the Czechoslovak situation and the possibility of a Nazi move there might bring Europe closer to the brink of war. Calling attention to the increased tension abroad was a decline in European currencies against the dollar, ascribed to a renewed flight of capital to this country in search of safety.

Also rated a powerful restraint on buying impulses was a continued downswing in major commodities, especially farm products. Indices of key staple prices were at new lows for the 1937-38 downturn.

Lower most of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Anaconda Copper, and Chemical, du Pont, U. S. Rubber, Westinghouse Electric, Santa Fe, J. I. Case, Woolworth, Douglas Aircraft, Eastman Kodak, American Smelting, Electric Power and Light and Yellow Truck.

American Can, American Telephone, Standard Oil of New Jersey and United Aircraft were among the few which managed to hold minor gains.

Most corporate bonds lagged, although action of top-grade issues still nourished hope for a revival of new financing.

Mayor's Message
Mayor Heiselman, Honorable City Officials, Ladies and Gentlemen—

It is indeed an honor and a privilege to assume my duties as mayor of the city and I wish to thank Mayor Heiselman, the aldermen and the members of the various boards for offering us this opportunity of running the city for a day. I am sure we will prove ourselves worthy of the honor conferred upon us by hard diligent work.

Members of the Common Council: At this time there are a number of recommendations which I wish to submit to you for your consideration.

The first is in reference to the city's greatest hazard, the Broadway railroad crossing. I am, as most of the people of this city, in favor of its elimination, because every moment those gates are down the people's lives and property are in danger, because both of our hospitals are on the east side of the tracks, while most of the population, including a large number of doctors, is on the west side. Therefore if this crossing were knocked while an emergency call for one of the hospitals, or a robbery of one of the banks took place, we would be in a dangerous position. Of course there will be much opposition from the railroad company because it will cost millions to perform this task, but every time a train passes through there, a life, worth millions to someone is in danger.

While we are on the subject of public safety, there is a topic which is very important for the welfare of our walking public, which I would like to bring out. That of the absence of safety zones on our busy street intersections. It is not safe for a person to stand in the middle of the street, while waiting to cross, even within the white lines. I suggest that safety zones, through which a car will not be allowed to pass, be put in the middle of the street between the white lines. These safety zones should be white lines drawn in the shape of a square, which would be large enough to permit three or four people to stand in them at one time. When this is done accidents to pedestrians will be greatly reduced.

Throughout the city we have many traffic lights which, while they are very good, but since these lights have been installed a problem has arisen which is of considerable importance. Our lights are of a style which change from red to green with a short pause between. This short pause is more dangerous than good because some of the motorists try to "jump the lights." In other words during this short interval many motorists put their cars into motion so that they may be ahead of everyone else in line, more often they are up in the hospital. There are many ways of eliminating this, the best being to insert a yellow caution light between the red and the green. Other cities have tried this and find it a very good system.

As the up-town shopping district of our city, we have a parking problem. As the majority of the people do not realize that the main streets should be used only for temporary parking. For instance the shop owners leave their cars on the street all day long and people from the country park for hours at a time so that when a person who wants to park for a short time arrives there are no convenient places. If we put parking meters along Wall street of a type which charge a certain sum per hour, we would force the people who plan on parking too long to make use of the parking lots and thus relieve the congestion. In addition to this the revenue derived from these meters could be used to keep these streets in repair.

We now come to the service which the city formerly rendered to its citizens but has been discontinued, the free ambulance service. It isn't right that a person in need of an ambulance should have to hire a private one because in many cases a person can't afford to pay the fee connected. Some people would hesitate to hire one because of this fee and serious complications could result. The main argument against such a service is the money connected with operating it, but it seems to me that the safety of our people is much more valuable than money.

Next I suggest that we hold elections in schools instead of fire houses and garages, so that the voters may have a better atmosphere in which to vote. In the first place, there couldn't be so many people around the schools as around the garages and fire stations because they are more closed in. I mean they can't see the voters would have a better chance to think clearly before they vote.

But now, let's turn to more cheerful things, such as our places of recreation.

In this respect there is the Kingston Point Park, which always was a favorite amusement place for Kingstonians, but for a number of years now has been closed. The city should take steps to reopen this park because if it were opened and kept in good condition it would be a place of recreation for our own people and would leave a good impression with the people on the Day Boat which stops there every day. You can see that by leaving such an impression with these people that we will take one more step towards bringing tourists to Kingston.

With warm weather approaching everyone's fancy turns to swimming, but we haven't a municipal swimming pool. True we do have various wading pools which are wonderful for the smaller children, but aren't of any use to adults. If we built a centralized swimming pool well guarded from disease and kept in the best of condition, we would not only have something to offer our own people but also those people who come to visit this city. So that it would be independent of the city's support a small sum might be charged to cover expenses.

My last recommendation is in connection with the Water Department. We have four reservoirs for the City of Kingston, two of which we need. The other two are of no use now and in all probability never will be used, yet we pay high taxes on them. This is a waste of the people's money that should be stopped. These two reservoirs should be sold.

In conclusion I might say that we of the Civics classes realize that we are not having a school holiday and that we are studying practical civics.

I thank you.

Judge Coleman Speaks
City Judge Robert Coleman was introduced by the presiding officer and spoke briefly thanking the mayor and his associates for the opportunity afforded the students to practice city government. He said that one of the problems in which all were deeply concerned was that of safety. "One suggestion I would like to make," he said, "is a light for pedestrians at the corner of Clinton avenue and Albany avenue. This is a dangerous corner as we all know and I believe such a light would help both pedestrians and motorists. I would like to see stricter enforcement of all stop signs at bad corners. Too many of our citizens are careless about observing these safety signs".

Judge Coleman also advocated the installation of a stop and go traffic light at Albany and Foxhall avenues.

Take Over City
The council then adjourned to meet again this morning when they held an all-day session as the students took over the reins of the city government.

Talk on India.

There will be a great opportunity to hear a gifted missionary to India on Thursday evening in the chapel of the First Dutch Church. Mrs. Henry Honegger has done splendid work in India. She went there in 1910 and has been engaged in evangelistic work ever since. In 1920 she opened a Christian social service center in Rangoon, a type of new missionary endeavor that few women have ever undertaken, and later, the Annie E. Hancock memorial social center at Vellore. Upon her return from her present furlough she will again take up her work of social service among the women of India. There will be a silver collection to defray traveling expenses at the door.
